

Stuart Allen Art Services

Renovated in 2019, the Inglewood Public Art website was restructured by Stuart Allen Art Services, a design firm that builds clean, elegant websites for artists, galleries, architects, non-profits, and select clients in other sectors. With 20 years of experience in this field, Principal, Stuart Allen understands the unique process, stakeholders, and public relations needs of public art projects.

The resulting website is a sustainable and flexible site that performs on desktop machines as well as mobile devices. The Allen Art Services team recognizes that the web is not a static environment; things change, technology changes. With this in mind, their team provides continued maintenance and updates to the Inglewood Public Art Website.

Culture Now

The original Inglewood Public Art website was designed by cultureNOW, a nonprofit 501c3 organization dedicated to the mission of public arts education and cultural tourism. cultureNOW believes that there are three facets to understanding a place: it's built environment (architecture), cultural insertions (public art) and what happened there (history). cultureNOW is trying to demystify the design process in the belief that the public would be more engaged participants if they were able to understand it. To that end, it has been creating a Museum Without Walls to make the world outside accessible via smartphone technology.

And Special Thanks to the 'Village of Inglewood'

This project is truly a testament to the passion, commitment, and dedication of Inglewood's friends and family, artists and neighbors who shared their love for this place and this community with us. In the past few years, throughout the country there has been quite a lot of discussion about the role of public art in placemaking. This project bears witness to the power of art in the public realm and the role it plays in binding a community together and in making a place come alive. It has been said that it takes a village to raise a 'child'. We think it's true.
